HONGKONG, JUNE 18TH, 1890.

It is extremely satisfactory to find from Mr. Morgan's report for last year that the Customs Authorities are satisfied the smuggling of opium from this port is nothing like so great as has been supposed. Although the decision of the Supreme Court delivered on the 22nd November practically upset the intended object of the Opium Ordinance of 1887 and opened the door again for the unrestrained circulation of loose drug, Mr. Morgan is satisfied that the arrival of opium smuggling apprehended as a consequence of this decision has not taken place to any serious extent; and he adds that though the air is thick with exaggerated rumours the greatest vigilance on the part of the Customs results in no considerable seizures or other uncontrollable proof of the existence in any magnitude of the clandestine traffic so freely talked of in the native tea shops; trustworthy evidence, happily, all to the opposite effect. Mr. MORAN recognises, however, that the situation is dangerous and urges that the necessary legislation be passed to meet the state of things established by the decision of the Supreme Court. It would seem that Macao also—where the facilities for smuggling are even greater than in Hongkong, the Opium Farmer there being allowed any amount he likes instead of as in Hongkong being limited to a certain number of chests—the Customs Authorities are satisfied that there is very little clandestine trade. Mr. HUMPHREY, the Commissioner at Lappa, gives figures in his last report which seem conclusively to support this position. All the opium, he says, brought from Hongkong to Macao by merchants was reshipped to China and paid duty to the Chinese Government. As regards that received by the Farmer, he tells down 2,713 chests during the year, of which 517 were intended to supply local consumption, and 2,196 chests to meet the requirements of the Chinese in Australia and California—2,070,249 lbs of prepared drug, the out-turn of 2,071 chests of crude opium, having been actually shipped. This leaves practically nothing for smuggling. The Macao Farmer seems to have the command of the Australian and California markets, and we understand he has been able to make arrangements by which his opium is allowed to be shipped in this harbour. Returning to the question of smuggling, we note that Mr. WOODHARVE, the Commissioner at Canton, mentions "smuggling on an unusual scale" as one of the reasons of the decline in the importation of opium at that port, but speaks of it as "since checked." The fact that the decline in the early part of the year was, at Canton as well as Kowloon, partially counter-balanced by an increase later on, confirms the opinion that smuggling cannot always be on the increase. The cause mentioned by Mr. WOODHARVE for the falling off in the early part of the year are: "The holding back of opium in India for trade reasons part of the year; the high, and generally falling, prices; in consequence of the high prices, the increased substitution of adulterants and of native opium by mixture with the foreign, and the bringing into circulation the surplus stocks still remaining from the 1887 oversupply; a transfer of a small part of the traffic to the Lappa offices; smuggling on an unusual scale for a time, since checked; and the impopularity of our district, until the last year's misfortunes were mended by the average crops of 1889." The causes assigned seem ample, sufficient to explain the deficiency that existed. Thus, collating the reports of the three Customs Stations in our immediate neighbourhood, Kowloon, Lappa, and Canton, we find no complaint of smuggling on an extensive scale as now going on; and, where it is mentioned, in the Canton report, it is referred to as since checked. This is satisfactory evidence of the smooth working of the Opium agreement, and it is confirmed by the figures supplied by the Hongkong Imports and Exports Office, which show that there is very little margin for smuggling between the quantities received, the quantities for which export permits were issued, and the quantity remaining in stock.

WHEN the Police Force was reorganised in 1862 there were appointed a Captain-Superintendent and an Assistant Superintendent. A Deputy Superintendent, ranking as second in command, was appointed in 1867. In 1879 the post of Assistant Superintendent was abolished and that of Chief Inspector created. In 1888 the post of Deputy Superintendent was abolished, and the Secretary of State directed that a second Chief Inspector should be appointed at a salary of $1,400 per annum. In place of this, however, it was finally decided to appoint temporarily, a Military Adjutant of Police, at a salary of $1,200, to superintend the drill and discipline of the men. In March of last year, when the Captain-Superintendent left the Colony for England and said "Good-bye" to the Force in anticipation of being permitted to retire on pension, a Military man was appointed to the command of the Police and the Adjutant of Police was transferred to the Prison department. The superintendence of the drill and discipline thus falling upon the Head of the Force, in addition to other duties, the question of strengthening the staff of Police was raised, and no doubt the Government came to the conclusion that, with a military man at the head of the department, the better plan would be to increase the Police element; and so the Secretary of State was asked to re-establish the post of Assistant Superintendent with a view of giving a step of promotion to deserving officers each grade of the European force. At the same time, to ensure that the drill and discipline of the men should be kept up, a competent Military Instructor was sent out from him, who was also to take up the duties of storekeeper at a salary of $700 per annum. We think we may fairly call this a saving of the salary of the store sergeant of $62 per annum, as it certainly admits to a Police Sergeant being available for other duties, and the number of both sergeants and men will have to be increased with the growth of the City. So far, then, we have a saving of $1,24, and if there is to be no Chief Inspector appointed another saving of $44 would be effected. To give one step of promotion in each grade would require perhaps a little more than this amount, but we should consider it money well spent, in increasing the salaries of deserving Police Officers of long service in the Colony, which would doubtless have a very good effect in the Force.

The Mercury translates the following from a native paper:—The Viceroy of the H. E. Provinces, Chang Ching-tung, issued a proclamation to the pawnshop proprietors ordering them to reduce the rates of interest which they charge on pawned articles to them by periods in single and double interest. The proclamation commands that from the 1st inst. to the 1st of June it is legal to charge 24 per cent. per annum, but during the 10th, 11th, and 12th months only 18 per cent. per annum shall be charged.

Elizetho, who has been in the habit of charging 40/10 of one per cent. during the months of October, November, and December, the Gratia picked up by the Ferry, was compelled to pay all the 24 per cent. per annum.

The Chinese are very fond of swimming, and lost their life in the ditches, it is a very striking instance of the fidelity of the native. But should you consider it a bad thing, as it could easily have done, it must have remained by his side, faithfully as he remained by his ship.

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian writes:—A single right-hand blow from the middle Temple Hall last night (11th May), two Indian students, one with a bow and arrow, the other with a sword, and both wearing flowing Oriental robes, came to keep term with the Government money now in their possession. The proprietors of pawnshops, who would be compelled to reduce the interest on their business, as the Government had done, were to be paid off with the amount of The 200,000, to be returned, so that I may establish a Government pawnshop. In order to benefit the poor people, and should you consider it a bad thing, as it could easily have done, it must have remained by his side, faithfully as he remained by his ship.
